The rolling hills of Dickson County contain a treasure that was once considered more precious than gold to the builders of young America. The treasure was iron ore, and it lured men by the hundreds to this area of Middle Tennessee.

The iron industry in Dickson County has been long silent, but the 3,782 acres that make up Montgomery Bell State Resort Park still show the signs of its presence. Near the remains of the Old Laurel Furnace, ore pits where men once scratched iron ore from the earth lie quiet and abandoned. The hardwood forest, once heavily cut to clear farmland and to produce charcoal for the iron furnaces, has slowly healed its wounds. Today's many visitors will delight in the park's scenery and will enjoy observing the abundant wildlife that freely roams its acreage and its 20 miles of hiking trails.

The park is located 7 miles east of Dickson, Tennessee on U. S. Highway 70. Turn north from the I-40 Montgomery Bell State Park exit and follow signs to the park.

Access Fees may apply. Call park for details.
